Staff meeting.

The Egyptian Ambassador called, and talked at considerable length about his Government's negotiations with the British.

George Sloan and Mr. Hoxter of the International Chamber of Commerce came to see me. George is seeing the Secretary this afternoon to discuss with him the foreign exchange provisions imposed by the Brazilian Government on foreign investors.

Attended Bob Murphy's swearing-in as Ambassador to Japan, [redacted] then saw Stanley Cleveland, who has just arrived here from Paris. He gave me the latest information on the EDC conference.

Had a sandwich in the office, [redacted] read [redacted] National Security Council papers.

My old friend, Fred Bate, came to see me. He is a consultant to the Information Service, but wishes to get a permanent position with it.

Dr. Compton brought in some of his people to brief me on the International Exchange of Persons activity. This resulted last year in bringing to the United States close to 7,000 persons, teachers, technicians, etc. At the same time, it was engaged in supervising the studies of almost 2,000 Orientals.

Duncan Pitney, a son-in-law of Ethel Garrett, called seeking a position.
